ABSTRACT

This visual arts creation thesis, The Colorful of Festivals, consisted of two purposes, which were 1) to study the Western brutalist painting method to study the expression of color. 2) to create the visual arts, to combine the Oriental color and composition in my work creation to express the visual art painting through thick lines, strong color contrast, and abstract festival elements to convey Chinese culture and happy festivals. The operation of this creation is mainly to collect field data, literature data, and the influence of creative work. The data analysis is carried out from the aspects of the theme, style, line, color, and festival activities to meet the concept of the work.

Simplified forms of modeling and color expression. The picture's composition is purer, the picture elements are more expressive, and colors are used to express feelings and atmosphere in the form of planarization. Learn from the aspects of Oriental painting. Different colors represent different Festival climate and temperature, and the shape of animals also means people's prayer for life. Do not pursue the accuracy of form and structure. It seeks emotional truth. There are no complex lines but warm and unrestrained colors. The use of color makes the picture more pure and full of childlike fun.

I hope to use the works to infect the audience and use the contents of the works to spread the spirit and culture. Give people spiritual strength and an optimistic attitude towards life.

Documentary Data

The painting art structure of the works of Brutalist painters is simple in form, with solid color vision and rough and smooth lines. Meanwhile, the pictures are full of children's interest. In my works, I draw on the creative characteristics of fauvism, using contrasting colors and high purity colors, simplified lines, and extensive composition to express the mood and atmosphere of festivals. At the same time, my works are full of childlike interest. In The painting concept of Matisse, I am loyal to my inner feelings to express. It has had an importessentialence on my artistic thinking.

Matisse is a representative of brutalism. He was influenced by black impressionist sculpture and eastern art trends in his early years. His works are incredibly concise and have a solid decorative meaning—his lifelong pursuit of a pure, peaceful, and harmonious, artistic expression. Rather than realistic painting, he pays more attention to the presentation of feeling and highlights the inner reality of objects. His works simplified the form of picture modeling and color expression. The composition of the picture is pure.

Lines constitute the artistic foundation of painting, and the use of different lines will make the picture have different styles and feelings. AndréDerain believes that detail destroys the purity of line and dampened perception. We can see from his works that his minimalist, changing lines show his perception, feeling, and perception of objects. This is the result of the simplification of the form of his art. The simplicity of the line does not mean that the picture is simple; on the contrary, compared with the complicated traditional sketch, this way of painting makes the performance of the work more connotation.

AndreDerain's works are complete and varied in structure, with horizontal, vertical, and diagonal compositions full of tension. In the use of color, a contrast color, line, and color surface are partially interlaced to make the color sense brighter and more prosperous. In his works, I also learned from the color proportion in his paintings and the application of comparative color in the picture to show the intense emotion and harmony of the image from the color contrast. Myth stories produced by different countries and nations have their own characteristics, with regional and national colors. Therefore, I take the material as an intervention point to study and discover local unique value orientation, which can promote the study of painting creation. I use the stories of traditional festivals and paint to open up a creative path with vitality.(Xie Sheng La 2018: online)

Theory

Fauvism is a style of painting that flourished in France from 1898 to 1908. Although it has no definite theory or program, Fauvism is the result of the active activities of a certain number of artists over some time. Therefore, it can also be regarded as a school of painting. Fauvism painters are keen on using bright and robust colors. They often use pigments directly extruded from paint tubes to create strong picture effects with frank and extensive brushwork, which fully shows the expressionism tendency to pursue emotional expression. Fauvism continues the post-impressionist explorations of Van Gogh, Gauguin, Cezanne and others in pursuit of more subjective and intense artistic expression. The painting style no longer pays special attention to perspective and light and shade, abandons the traditional relationship between perspective and light and shadow, and adopts a more balanced composition, strong contrast between dark and light, pure realism, and adds its own emotions.

Brutalism had an important influence on the development of western painting. They absorbed the expressive techniques of eastern and African art. They paid attention to creating a sparse and straightforward artistic conception different from western picture paintings, with an apparent tendency for freehand brushwork.

Some see brutalism as part of a broader expressionist movement. It has also been argued that brutalism was not an artistic movement but merely a brief phase in the creative life of Matisse and others, one that paid particular attention to line and color expression and was not bound by any program. "For me," Matisse later recalled, "the Period of the Beast was an experiment in painting tools. I had to combine blue, red, and green in an expressive and meaningful way."(Calligraphy and Painting Art Collection, 2018: online)

Modernism painting style, the pursuit of subjectivity and strong artistic expression, drawing on the expression techniques of eastern art, using bright and thick colors, with blunt and extensive brush strokes to create strong picture effect, fully embodies the expressionism tendency of pursuing emotional expression.

In China, auspicious symbols, and patterns seem to be very humble, but everywhere, no one use. Auspiciousness to Chinese people is like water to fish and the sky to birds. It seems that no one can say clearly when and where the auspicious culture of China originated. The only certainty is that they were created when people had the desire to pursue happiness, beauty and peace. It pervades every aspect of life in many ways and in many forms. So understand auspicious culture, also understand Chinese culture, Chinese people is very important side.

Influence from Visual Arts

1. Visual Arts from Other Artists

Fauvism pursues more subjective and intense artistic expression. The painting style no longer pays special attention to perspective and light and shade, abandons the traditional relationship between philosophy and light and shadow, adopts a more balanced composition, strong contrast between dark and light, pure realism, and adds its own emotions. The main principle of brutism is to achieve the effect of space management by using color to play the role of light. Flat drawings without modeling or hallucinatory light and shade are all adopted. The means should be purified and simplified, and composition should be used to achieve absolute unity between expression and decoration, namely, between touching hints and internal order. Brutalist painters are keen on using bright and robust colors. They often use pigments directly extruded from paint tubes to create strong picture effects with frank and extensive brushwork, which fully shows the expressionism tendency to pursue emotional expression.

1.1 In one of his 1908 paintings, The Red Table, Matisse turns the scene into a decorative pattern. The wallpaper pattern interacts with the texture of the tablecloth covered with food to form the theme of this classic painting. The silhouettes of women and trees are greatly simplified and even distorted to match the paper flowers and look very harmonious. Some of the decorative effects of children's paintings can also be seen in this brightly colored, simple silhouette. The bold plane composition, bright colors, and simple lines have influenced my work.

.12 Matisse's paintings seem to involve very little technology. The technique was not necessary to him because he never bothered to convey the accuracy of his subjects. In his work music, he pursues exaggeration. Like the painting we see today, it's clear that the two women in the picture are flat, their features are outlined in lines, and then the artist exaggerates their form. In my works, I also use plane composition and exaggerated expression techniques.

1.3 "Colors become bombs," he once said. They must radiate. In its freshness, anything can rise above the truth. "He regards color as the soul of a painting, and" Westminster Bridge "is a representative work of his group of paintings. In this painting, Tran chose a high-point composition, with large areas of green, yellow, red, and blue as the primary colors. The strong contrast of these color blocks makes the picture full of rhythm and tension. The solid-colored branches, twisted and twisted over a large patch of complementary color, serve to harmonize the contrasting colors. The whole painting is colorful, bright, simple in shape, and mighty in strokes, reflecting Derain's extraordinary skills in dealing with color and structure.

Results of Data Analysis

I mainly study the composition elements of Matisse's painting art and the influence of artistic thoughts on my creation. Inspire inquiry, create pictures, a sense of form, and exciting expression. In the design, I hope to record the life around me and unique festivals by using the property of color and painting expression. Chinese traditional festivals are created by the working people and have a close relationship with people's life, production, customs, and habits. They represent love for life and a wish for happiness. Reference to the color of style, combined with Oriental color at the same time, we want to pursue the feeling of the heart, in the present, pay more attention to draw in the intuitive sketch in the face of things, to avoid the conceptual color and composition, the subjective color more enthusiastic and bold and unrestrained, refine to colorific, so that the picture is more pure, rich in childlike fun.

Results of Creation

1. Thesis work 1

1.1 Idea/ Concept: Create themes related to traditional festivals to convey joy.

Purpose of Creation

1. Study the color attributes of Chinese festivals and the characteristics of festival elements, and explore how different colors, lines, and compositions can convey people's feelings and power. The Colorful of Festivals visually describes a positive, passionate and positive attitude towards life. At the same time, I collected a lot of Chinese traditional festival elements and pictures and adopted the style of brutalism. My works can convey a happy festival atmosphere to everyone through visual communication so that more people can understand Chinese culture. In the creation process, the contrast of different colors, painting practice, and the attempt of style. In visual art, by studying data, analyzing data, distinguishing data, obtaining information, and improving creative skills, we can work more smoothly and create better results.

2. In the creation, I to finish his work in painting way, number of 9 with the picture, color, lines, and the composition of the western and the characteristics of color and element combination of the east, in the process of creation, tried a different character image composition of illustration, try the use of different contrast color, try the thick line drawing, Finally, a lot of Chinese red was added to the work, because red represents auspiciousness, happiness, and happiness, with a good meaning. Different colors represent different holiday climates and temperatures, and the shapes of animals also represent people's prayers for life. The precision of shape structure is not pursued. It seeks emotional truth. There are no complicated lines but warm and bold colors. The use of color makes the picture purer and full of childlike interest. 2. Results of Creation Modelling and colour expression form simplify. The composition of the picture is more pure, the picture elements are more expressive, using color to express feelings and atmosphere. In the form of planarization. Draw on the elements of eastern painting. Different colors represent different holiday climates and temperatures, and the shapes of animals also represent people's prayers for life. Precision of shape structure is not pursued. It seeks emotional truth. Instead of complex lines, colors are warm and unrestrained. The use of color makes the picture more pure, full of childlike interest.

Discussion

The result of creation was discovered which indicated

1. Results of Data Analysis

Matisse's artistic concept had the most significant impact on me, is to let me to the vision. Let my imagination, from the direction of realistic oil painting, express the feelings of the heart, land et my words further liberation. My understanding of environmental color has risen from inherent color to subjective emotional color, which liberates my mind in color. I began to pay attention to the symmetry, stability, balance, and rhythm in the picture's composition. The overall coordination of the degree of attention to the regularity and order, reduces artistic concepts and conceptual painting. Instead, he used an emotional-based image. Through the continuous simplification of the form on the picture, composition elements, and coordination of the relationship between organizations, to have a deeper understanding of self.

2. Results of Creation

Color replaces complex lines. Different colors will give viewers different visual feelings and psychological experiences, and the subjective colors are more warm and bold. Through the consistency of objective things to their inner mapping, psychological textures straight to the heart, the color of the refining and generalization, the picture is more pure, rich in childlike fun.

3. The new finding/ the new knowledge

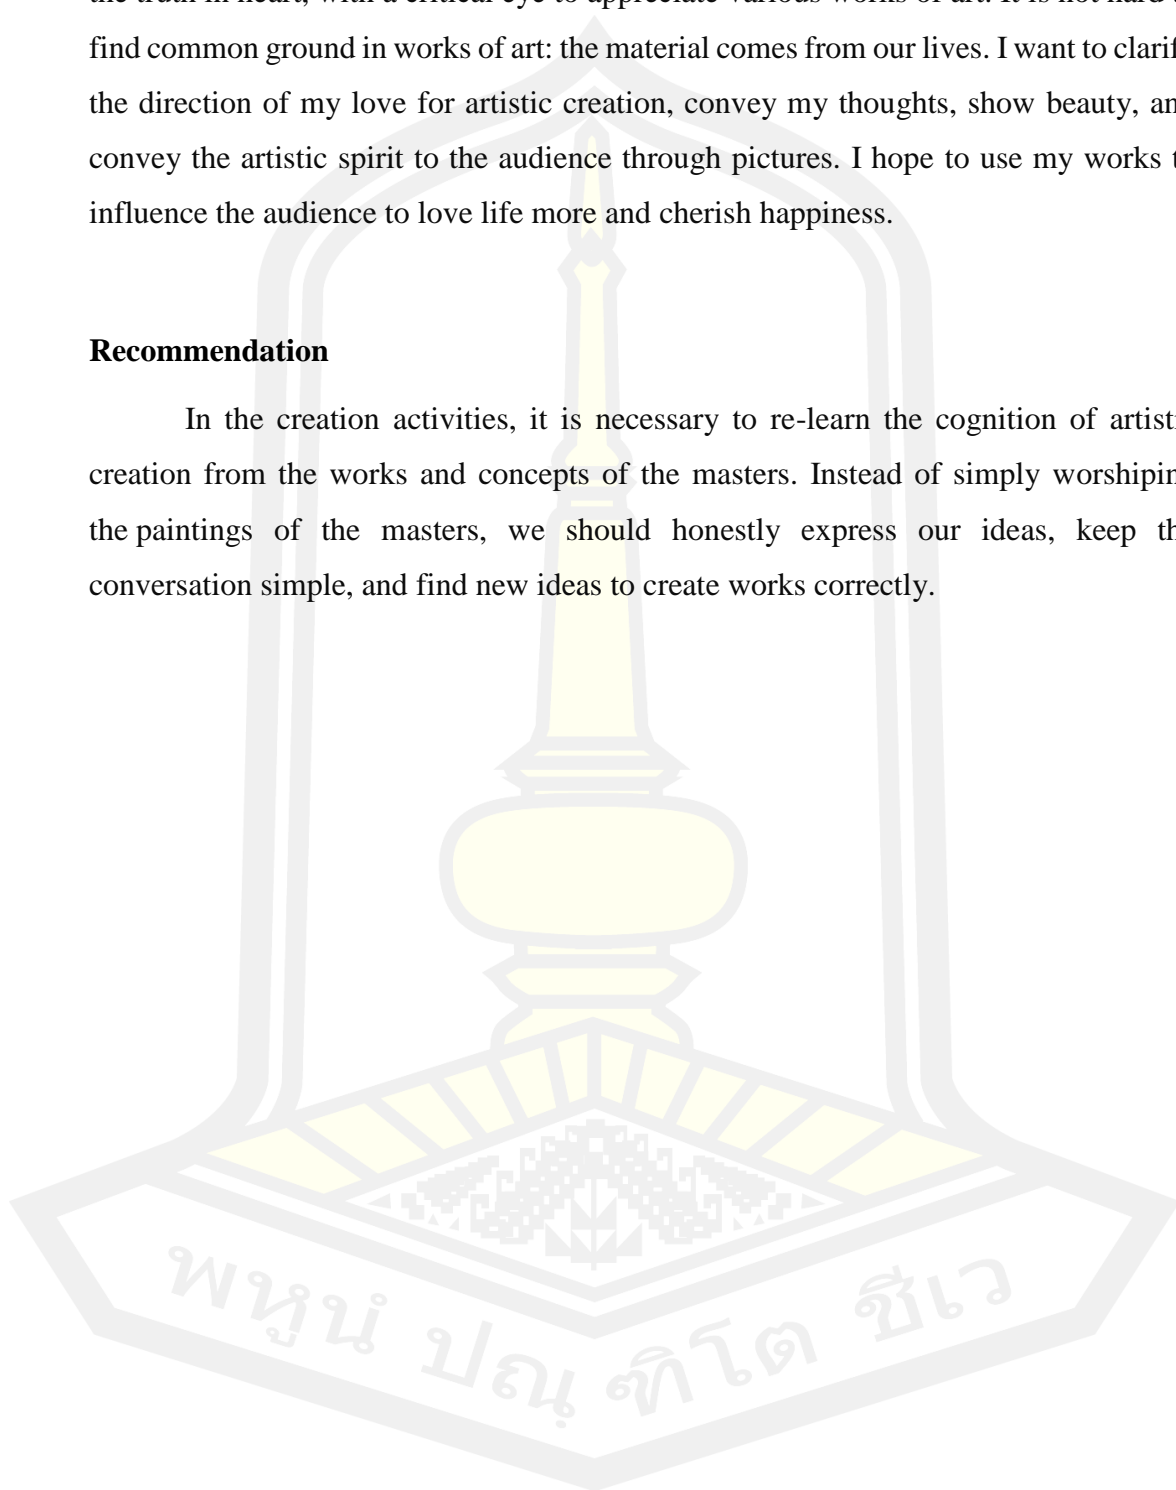

The old and new artistic concepts and styles are not the absolute criteria to determine whether a painter is good or bad. Painting is not a matter of style but level. I think it is more important to simplify color and modeling, strengthen the use of lines in the painting, and pay attention to their emotional expression. Through the continuous simplification of formal language, breaking the traditional single means of painting, and the lack of emotional words of their own, children's eyes to see life, shaping their nature of painting.

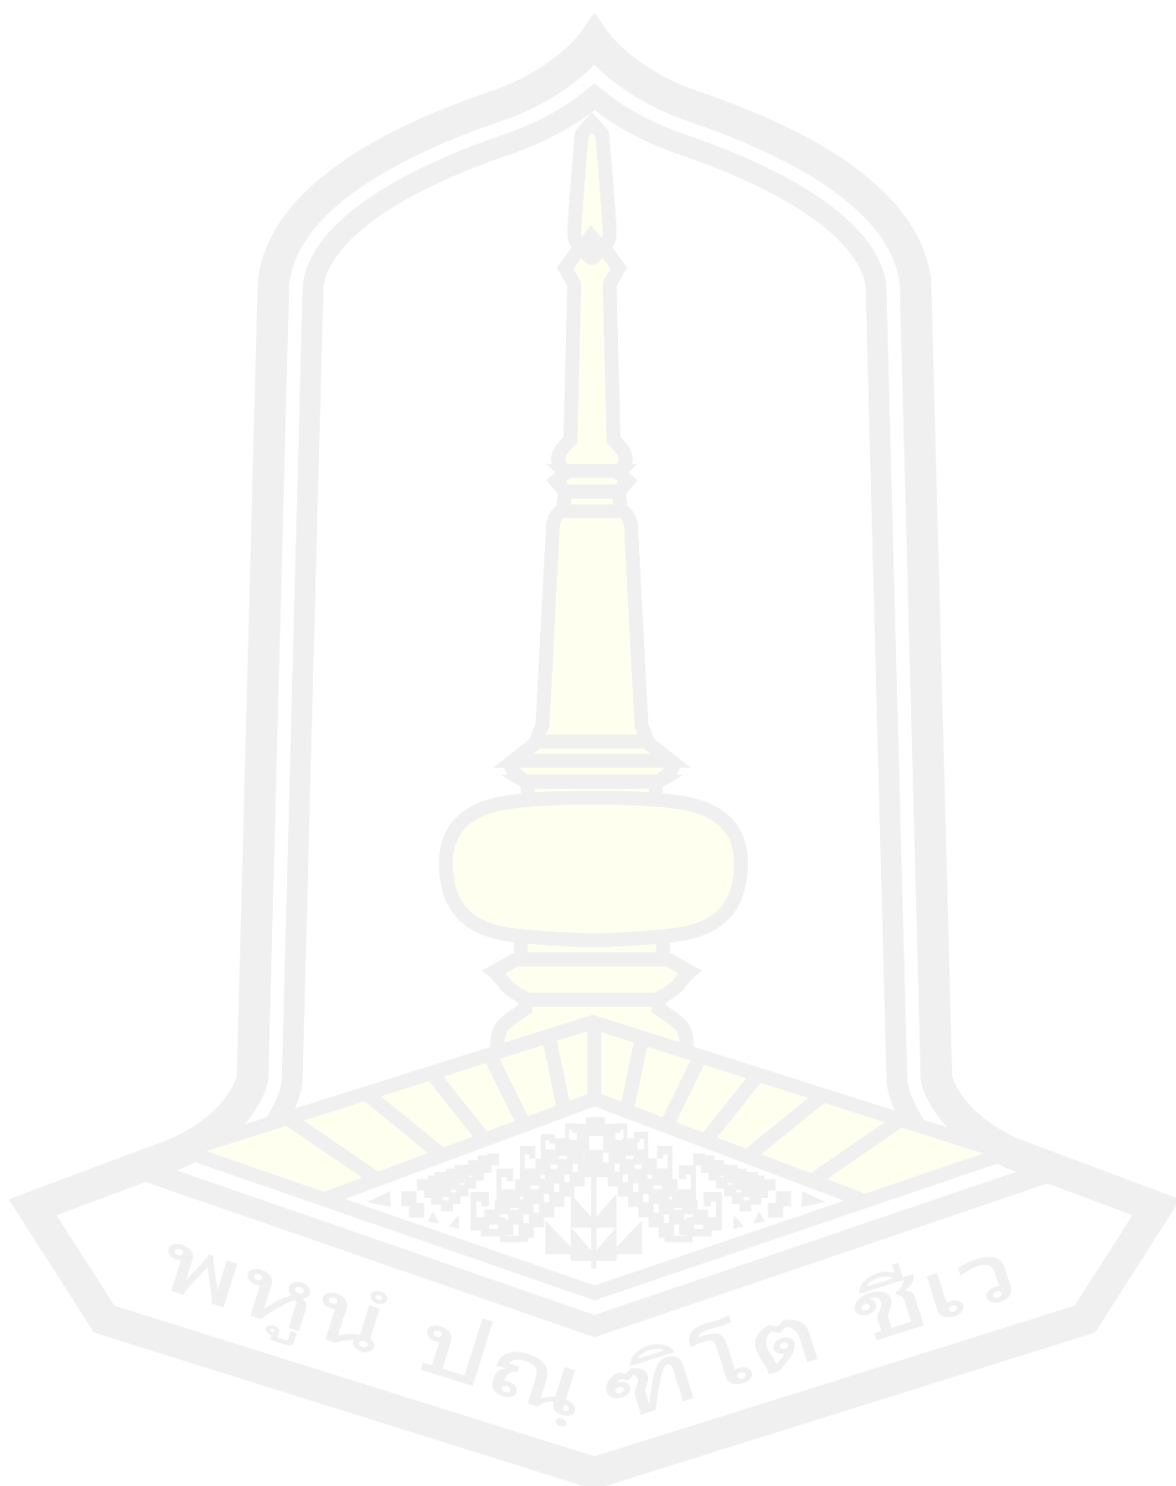

4. The effects of reaction on the social or technical field

Use the artist's wisdom to find beauty in nature. With the rich experience to comprehend the truth in heart, with a critical eye to appreciate various works of art. It is not hard to find common ground in works of art: the material comes from our lives. I want to clarify the direction of my love for artistic creation, convey my thoughts, show beauty, and convey the artistic spirit to the audience through pictures. I hope to use my works to influence the audience to love life more and cherish happiness.

Recommendation

In the creation activities, it is necessary to re-learn the cognition of artistic creation from the works and concepts of the masters. Instead of simply worshiping the paintings of the masters, we should honestly express our ideas, keep the conversation simple, and find new ideas to create works correctly.
